RESEARCH GRANTS WON WITHIN THE LAST FIVE YEARS

PREVIOUS RESEARCH GRANT

- Grant of the Tuning Africa Project Phase 2, (2015 to February 2018). Tuning is an internationally recognized method for re-designing, developing, implementing and evaluating competence-based-study programmes as well as the development of new teaching and learning methods. The Tuning project was funded by the Commission of the European Union, sponsored by the African Union Commission and coordinated by the University of Deusto, Spain. The general objectives of the project were to contribute and support the harmonization of higher education programmes and to revitalize higher education in Africa as well as make it globally competitive. The specific objectives were the establishment of new degree programmes and the establishment of new teaching, learning and assessment methods. To achieve these objective, 120 universities representing the five sub-regions of Africa participated and focused on the following eight subject area groups: Medicine, Teacher Education, Agricultural Sciences, Mechanical Engineering, Civil Engineering, Economics, Applied Geology and Higher Education. Nnamdi Azikiwe University belonged to the Higher Education working group. The results were duly submitted in February, 2018.
